DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION.

Up to the time of the assembling of the Convention at Harrisburg on Wednesday afternoon it looked very much as though the session would be a turbulent one, owing to the contests in several districts, and especially in Philadelphia, by rival delegations, for seats in the Convention. The so-called Wallace and Randall factions seemed to be unable to arrive at any compromise that would bring harmony. Chairman Miller called the convention to order at 1:15 and very soon afterwards it appeared that a basis of agreement had been reached that put an entirely new aspect on the meeting. After the appointment of secretaries, Mr. Cassidy of Philadelphia, one of the leaders of the "regular organization" arose and said:

Mr. Chairman: I wish, with the permission of this body, to make a statement, and to follow it with a motion. I desire to say that I am bringing to this convention glad tidings. [Great applause.] They are tidings that the people of the party throughout the commonwealth, from one end to the other, have been looking for, hour after hour; and now, almost at the last moment, with failure imminent; when impetuosity and high temper are apt to rule, they have given way to reason and directed to say that there is a plan by which we believe the differences in Philadelphia, and the differences throughout the state will be settled upon a basis creditable to all, honorable to all, and eminently useful to that great party here represented. [Vociferous applause, cheering, and renewed cheering.] The party that my name has been identified with perhaps more than any other in the city of Philadelphia, and known as the "regular organization," is here under recognized and well known rules. While they desire that all shall know that they are here in accordance with recognized rules, they desire also that all shall know that they are willing to take by the hand all men! (here the speaker's voice was drowned by applause and cheers), and as an evidence that we do mean that its matters shall be finally closed and put upon a proper adjustment, not only with a view of what is to be done to-day, but so that there shall be hereafter in the great city of Philadelphia one party only under the banner of the democratic part. [applause] to present a united front against the common enemy, I have been asked to move (and I trust there will not be a dissenting vote) that the differences in that city and all contests throughout the state shall be referred to a committee of six.

Since I am asked to name the committee I would state that upon consultation we have agreed upon names that, I think, when you hear them, you will say is the best evidence that we not only mean to settle, but we mean to settle upon fair terms. [Applause.]

I therefore move that this subject be referred to the Hon. Andrew H. Dill, of Union [applause]; the Hon. William S. Stenger, of Franklin [applause], the Hon. Robert M Gibson [applause], the Hon. William M Mutchler, of Northampton [applause], the Hon. George A. Jenks, of Jefferson [applause], and the Hon. R. Milton Speer, of Huntingdon [applause]. For the purpose of allowing these gentlemen time to consult and report, I trust a recess will now be taken—the convention first, however, adopting the resolution properly and honorably.

As he concluded and the great result which had been consummated fully dawned upon the convention, and the spectators, the most intense enthusiasm prevailed. The scene that ensued is beyond description. Ringing cheer upon cheer went up until it seemed as though the strong building would be shaken to its foundations.

Speeches were made by R. M. Spear, of Huntingdon; Richard Vaux, of Philadelphia; Malcom Hay, of Pittsburg; R M Gibson, A. H. Dill, W. S. Stenger and W. N. Hensel. The whole house then called "Randall, Randall," and that gentleman rose amid the wildest cheering. He said:

Mr. Chairman: This is the happiest political moment of my life. [Great applause.] This gives to the people of Pennsylvania and to the people of the United States hope that we shall early in the future return to constitutional government, and soon be in a position to demand of the executive officers of this government that they shall administer affairs according to the laws and the constitution of the country. [Applause.] I do not mean to detain the body; but I say with all my energy, with all my intellect, with all the powers which I possess, that this means a thorough, complete and honorable peace, the ending of all war in our party and an unending war on our opponents.

He had no sooner finished than there was a unanimous cry for Wallace.

Mr. Wallace rose from his seat beneath the gallery. "Order, Order," called those below. "Hurrah for Wallace," shouted those above. "Bring him out where we can see him." Mr. Wallace was escorted to full view in the centre aisle and a great deafening roar of welcome arose from the vast assemblage. It was useless for Mr. Wallace to attempt to speak until the cheering which it seemed would never cease had subsided. At length quiet was restored and he addressed the convention.

Gentlemen of the Convention: I thank you for the honor of this greeting. It will scarcely be supposed of me, after giving to the Democracy of Pennsylvania the best years of my life, that I would fail in this crisis of its history. [Great applause.] I have in the past done what man could do for the advancement of the faith in which I was born, and in which I hope to die. I do not, therefore, come here to pledge you what my future is to be—you know it from the past. That is the guidon of my policy. I shall pursue that course, erring I know as mortals do err. But whether I am in the advance, or of the soldiery, and in the ranks of the private, [applause], I yield to the democracy of Pennsylvania, and I accede to their demands when they seek unity, harmony, concession and forbearance. [Applause.] Whatever may have been said in the immediate past, I trust the immediate future is to be one of victory only—victory only in a contest unequalled in the history of parties in the past, and in which concessions are graver, more important, farther reaching to our beloved country than any that have occurred in the history of the past. You will find me wherever the Democracy of Pennsylvania see fit to place me. [Applause.] I am their servant and will obey their behests. [Great applause.] I yield to no man in the presentation of a basis, a just basis of unity and sentiment; and this I believe to be one that will bring to the future of the Democracy of Pennsylvania peace, harmony and victory. [Great and long-continued applause.]

The speeches were received with immense enthusiasm.

An adjournment was made until 5 o'clock, at which time the committee on contests not being ready to report the meeting adjourned again until 8 o'clock in the evening. The committee then reported progress, and said they would be ready to report in the morning, and 9 o'clock was fixed for the meeting of the convention on Thursday morning.

The different congressional delegations met during the day on Wednesday, and made selections of delegates to the National Convention. For the eleventh district, our townsman, David Lowenberg, and R. H. Staples were chosen. The district delegation of Pennsylvania will stand 36 Anti-Tilden and 18 for Tilden. Hancock is the favorite.

Up to the time we go to press, (Thursday noon) further proceedings of the convention have not been received.

The Clearfield Citizen understands that the Greenback party in that county is to be reorganized and advises against such foolishness. The Citizen, formerly a Greenback paper, says: "It wasn't wrong to be a Greenbacker when there was something else than the name to it, but now, when it has resolved itself into a party of dissatisfied and disappointed politicians, no excuse can be made for its adherents."

Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks says he will not allow his name in connection with the Vice Presidency this year. That four years ago, unexpectedly and without consultation, he was elected to the second place on the ticket, and in duty to his party he accepted, but now he has a chance to express his views on the subject beforehand. He does not consider the office of Vice-President very attractive to a man who has been a United States Senator.

THE BRIBERS SENTENCED.

Judge Pearson passed sentence on the riot bill bribers last Monday. Kemble, Salter, Rumberger, Petroff, and Crawford, were each fined one thousand dollars and sentenced to imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary for one year. The punishment is indeed severe, but not too much so for the crime of which these men are guilty. It is probable that laws will be made in this State hereafter without the free use of money to obtain their passage, and the time may soon come when men of ability and integrity will not refuse to represent their districts because of the disgraceful manner in which the Legislation has been conducted for some years past. A wholesome lesson has been learned, and it is hoped that it will not soon be forgotten.

It is said that the Board of Pardons will hold a session soon. Will these men be pardoned?

Whatever else may be doubtful about the intention of the authors of our tariff laws, they undoubtedly meant to place on the free list all materials used in the manufacture of paper. It happened that pulp of wood, which is by far the most important element in the manufacture of paper used by the daily and weekly press of the country, was not specifically and by name exempted from duty. Under a Treasury decision which held that this verbal omission was fatal to the free admission of wood pulp, a few manufacturers of that article have been able to impose an exorbitant tax on the general body of paper-makers, by whom it is of course shifted on the consumers, the newspaper publishers of the country, and the burden falls with special hardship on publishers outside of the great cities—we, consequently being impoverished so that a handful of monopolists may grow rich. The most powerful champion of these monopolists is Representative Garfield. Were his opposition to the bill withdrawn, the restoration of wood pulp to the free list, where it belongs, would be accomplished in a few days. While his opposition continues the monopolists are secure. Can Mr. Garfield afford to continue his support of a most odious and oppressive tax which brings in no revenue to the Government, but which interferes very decidedly with the dissemination of knowledge among the people?

The Disbarred Attorneys.

The Supreme Court will meet in Harrisburg on Monday, May 3, at which time it is expected the appeal of Messrs. A. J. Steinman and W. Uhler Hensel, the disbarred attorneys will be heard. These gentlemen have retained Rufus E. Shapley, Esq., James E. Gaven, Esq., and Colonel A. K. McClure, of the Philadelphia Times, as their counsel, the latter being expected to direct his attention principally to the relations of the appellants, as editors, to the court. In an interview with his Honor, Judge Patterson, your correspondent was informed that he had not yet retained counsel, although he had received offers from Republican and Democratic attorneys all over the state to represent his cause. When told that a rumor prevailed that Attorney General Palmer had been retained, as well as Samuel H. Reynolds Esq., of Lancaster, he replied that they had been mentioned in connection with the matter, and were among those whose services were at his disposal, but that no definite arrangement had been made. It is believed by those who stand very close to Judge Patterson that the gentlemen named will appear as his counsel.

ORANGEVILLE ITEMS.

The funeral of Mrs. Caroline Coleman took place on Sunday. The Union church was filled to its utmost capacity, and the officiating pastor, Rev. H. A. Dietterick delivered a highly appreciative discourse.

All of our merchants have returned from the city and are now busy re-stocking their stores with new goods. The commercial business of this place has almost doubled during the last few years. This speaks well for our men of traffic.

The number of students enrolled at the Academy for this term exceeds 90. It will quite probably reach 100.

Rev. Dickson, of Berwick, delivered a lecture on Monday evening.

The portable saw mill has at last arrived, and will soon begin the Cadman and Kline contract, and many a stately oak which has hitherto graced our beautiful Nob Mountain, will be felled by the woodman's ax, cut into logs, stripped of its thick, rough bark, sawed into lumber, sent to Berwick, and there become the rolling stock of some railroad.

The Union Sunday School is now being supplied with a new library, "to guide our erring youths in the path where once their fathers trod."

Our milliners have received their new hats and bonnets, but whether they will make better or worse the appearance of the wearer, will be demonstrated on the first fair day in May.

George, the new grocer, makes a very pleasant and agreeable clerk.

A number of our people attended the dedication of Kitchen's church on Sunday.

James B. Harman intends starting for Kansas in a few days.

FRED. B. HARTMAN,
April 30-2w Secretary.

The question has been asked us, if head stones can be secured from the government for Union soldiers whose graves are unmarked. In reply we would state that blank forms of application will be furnished to Posts of the Grand Army in this county, or to persons individually interested, by application to C. B. Brockway, Secretary of Soldiers' Union.

Notwithstanding the fact that the Exchange Hotel is already one of the best furnished and elegantly finished houses in the state, improvements are constantly being made. The upper halls and rooms have recently been newly papered and painted, and other additions made to its many conveniences. This house is one that our citizens may well take pride in, as it is the surprise of all who are its guests to find a hotel so complete in its appointments and management in a town of this size. Tubbs & Chamberlin have gained a wide reputation as competent and obliging landlords.

An exceedingly funny burlesque on the ways and tricks of politicians is "Our candidate," which was produced here on Friday night last. The portrayal of the character of Grimwig, by Richmond, was a clever and natural piece of acting. He comprehends fully the character, and his acting is free from that affected style which so many of our comedians fall into. Von Boyle as a representative of "Our Coming Citizen" would be hard to beat, "Bang" and "Frogtoes" were well taken. As a whole, the performance was a good one and judging from the thunders of applause which followed each witty saying, was generally appreciated by the large audience which greeted it.

The contract for the erection of the Miners' Hospital, at Ashland, was awarded to W. S. Patterson & Co., of Philadelphia, at a meeting held by the Commission on Friday the 16th. The main building is to be 187 feet front and two stories and a basement high, surmounted by a tower and spire, the top of which will be 170 feet from the ground. The ward buildings are to be one story high with basement, and are 42 feet wide by 142 feet long. The ends flank the main building and have the appearance of wings to it. There is also the kitchen, store room and pantry, in the rear of main building between the two wards. The total front of the building will be 187 feet and depth to rear end of wards 192. Various estimates were given in sealed proposals, varying from $47,700 to $71,700. The entire work was given to Messrs. Patterson & Co., for $47,700.

BLOOMSBURG, April 29th, 1880.

D. LOWENBERG, Pres't.
Attest: W. H. ABBOTT, Sec'y.

A SPLENDID COMPANY OF ARTISTS.

From the Daily Dispatch, Erie, Pa.

Anthony & Ellis' Uncle Tom's Cabin Company gave at the Opera house last night a better representation of that celebrated story, than we supposed were possible in a single evenings entertainment. The characters were exceedingly well sustained throughout the entire cast. Topsy by Miss Minnie Foster, and little Eva by Little May Hillman who traveled all last season with Modjeska, were surprisingly fine. Mr. Clarke performed Phineas Fletcher to an admiration, and Mr. Hart performed the difficult role of Marks to perfection. Uncle Tom was most faithfully portrayed by Mr. Perkins D. Fisher, and the prim Miss Ophelia by Miss Cannon. The humorous, pathetic and villainous were finely blended and carried the audience along with each phaze of sentiment. It would be silent and angry at Simon Legree, tearful at the sufferings of Uncle Tom and the death of Eva and Mr. St. Clair, and wild with delight at the funny rendition of the parts of Phineas, Marks the Quaker and the deacon. The house was inconveniently full, and the wish was often expressed that an opportunity might be offered to witness the performance again. The Jubilee Singers were exceedingly fine.

Will play at the Opera House, this Friday evening.

WATER COMPANY ENJOINED.

A bill in equity has been filed by the Town of Bloomsburg against the Bloomsburg Water Company and H. M. Birkenbine and Harry Birkenbine, contractors, asking the Court to grant an injunction to restrain the defendants from obstructing travel and maintaining a nuisance on the streets by leaving open ditches, and violating ordinances concerning the grade, &c. A preliminary injunction has been issued.

ASBURY ITEMS.

The prospect was a good one this year for a good crop of whortleberries on the Nob Mountain, had it not been for some bad fellows who put fire in the dry leaves in that dry time, and not only blighted our prospect of a good crop of berries, but doing other injuries, such as destroying young and valuable timber and burning the farmers fences at the foot of the Mountain. The rascals ought to be caught and punished severely.

Quarterly Conference held at this place on the nineteenth inst., was well represented by the official members. T. O. Clees in charge officiated, the elder not being present on account of ill health. The regular business was gone through with and the finances footed up $85.20 cash.

The widow Runyan of Asbury, has made some important repairs by way of a picket fence on front street, and a new fence all around her lot. She intends building a new part to her house and rebuild her old one. Mrs. David Coleman is following suit by way of making new fences on same street. Hope some of the male members will take pattern by them.

BERWICK LETTER.

EDS. COLUMBIAN:

Mr. Kinney Adams is in Philadelphia this week, purchasing a new stock of goods for his store.

Col. Reynolds, Maj. Bonnet, Adj. Moore and Capt. Rash, of the 9th Penn'a. Regiment were in town on Tuesday and in the evening, at the armory, with Col. C. G. Jackson and Capt. Seely of town, reviewed the company.

A reception was held on Tuesday evening in the Presbyterian church, in honor of Rev. Kumler, who has accepted a call from this church. Mr. Petty delivered a neat address of welcome, which was replied to by the new pastor with a fitting speech. Refreshments were served later to the guests. Mr. Kumler is an accomplished gentleman and deserves all the success we wish him.

One night last week the burglars had a "night out," and honored the R. R. depot with a serenade. They effected an entrance through a back window, securing no more but a valise of samples belonging to Mr. Keiser, a traveling salesman. The booty was worth in the vicinity of one hundred dollars. Mr. Keiser is looking for a man profusely decorated with silk handkerchiefs.

On Monday night, William Fenner, a young lad 14 years of age, was instantly killed at the rolling mill, where he was employed. Bending over the collars of the rollers to get a drink of water from the spout, he was seized by a projecting wire attached to one of the collars and whirled round again and again, dashing his head against the iron machinery with such force that his skull was completely shattered.

Prof. Cecil, an exposer of spiritualism, held two exhibitions in town last week. He performed many of the wonderful feats of mediums by jugglery, explaining them or most of them on the second evening. Several of the tricks looked supernatural. Jacoby handcuffed him securely, but entering the cabinet a minute, he returned with his hands free and the iron bracelets fastened to a chain. A committee from the audience tied him hand and foot in the cabinet, and while closing the doors they were rapped on the head by his hand, though still securely bound. Again the doors were closed, and on opening he was found tied as before but without a coat on his back. Again he was found with one of the committee's coat on. Most wonderful was this. The committee tied a rope tight round his neck, threw the ends over a beam of the cabinet, raised him from the floor, when suddenly he dropped to the floor, leaving the rope uncut and untied in the committee's hands. This latter feat was one of the few he would not explain. The explanations made the feats exceedingly simple. It is not at all surprising that there are many believers in spiritualism. Had this man claimed to be a medium, more than half his audience would have been much distressed in mind. If the expert juggler can rival the medium and out-medium him, what is there in spiritualism? Cecil claims that he can produce slate-writing, almost the greatest feat of mediums. Through deception, table movings and rappings he performed.

GOOD COMPANY NUMBER EIGHT.

Good Company, ($5.00 a year, Springfield, Mass.,) Number Eight opens with a story by Mrs. Rebecca Harding Davis which is not lacking in her usual vigorous touches. The other stories are "A Tale of the North Shore" and "Not in the Curriculum," both from new contributors.

"Barberry Island" of the last number is followed by "The Schoolmistress on Barberry Island," equally attractive in quaintness.

A readable paper on "Archery as It Is" is by Maurice Thompson, the well-known authority on this subject. E. S. Gilbert contributes one of his fascinating articles, entitled "Spring Flowers," which gives evidence of much familiarity with them.

Mr. George M. Towles writes interestingly of Castelar, the Spanish statesman, and Edward Abbott gives some account of Mary Carpenter, the devoted English philanthropist, whose visit to this country some years since will be recalled.

Death has again been in our midst and removed from our community the venerable Aaron D. Guild. The deceased moved and settled here in an early day. Was for many years a resident of Hemlock, but recently lived with his daughter, Mrs. Welliver, in Montour, where he died on Monday at the advanced age of 83. He was for many years a consistent member of the Presbyterian church and died happy in a Savior's love. Several children and many grand-children and great-grand children survive him. The friends have the sympathy of the entire community in their sad bereavement.

TWO CENT POSTAL CARDS.

The House Committee on Post Offices has agreed to a bill providing for a two cent postal card, the card to have a double lap or cover adapted to conceal the writing. The committee say in their report that this card will be an intermediate means of correspondence between the letter sheet and envelope and the open postal card, and would be availed of by thousands who will not use the open postal card on account of its publicity. The proposed cards would not hold any more than the one cent card, and its adoption could not, therefore, affect letter correspondence.

EXTRACT FROM A SPEECH OF HON CLARKSON N. POTTER, DELIVERED 12th OCTOBER, 1879.

Men tell us that the South will repudiate the National debt, because they have repudiated their own debts. And so they have, and so have also many Northern communities! There are scores of towns in the North; yes, and Republican towns in this State, which are now engaged in repudiating their debts! Communities are too apt to repudiate their debts when they have been fraudulently contracted, or when they are unable to pay them. The debts of the South have often been fraudulently contracted, contracted without value, and for communities utterly unable to pay them. You have little idea of how wretchedly poor and beggared those Southern States are. But, at the same time, they have no interest in repudiating the National debt. Its burden does not fall on them, and it is so interwoven with the commerce and industry of the country, that the first movement to repudiate it would bring on a shock to the credit and business of the whole of the country which would involve them and every one else in a common disaster.

So with the payment of the Rebel debt. The South does not hold that debt. It was largely owned abroad. There were, to be sure, a considerable amount of Confederate notes held at home; but they became so utterly worthless that the people did not even preserve them, and it is doubtful whether many millions of them could be got together in the whole country. Besides, if the South could be so insane as to wish either to pay the Rebel debt, or to repudiate the National debt, remember that under the Constitution it requires three fourths of these States to do that; and the South is not three-fourths, but only one third; and after the apportionment of 1880 it will be less than one-fourth of the whole country, and every year these Northern States are growing richer and stronger, and the South is growing weaker and poorer. There would be danger from such insanity, or any other insanity of the South, exactly when one fourth gets to be greater than three-fourths, and not before.

So with the pretence that the South will beggar the treasury with Rebel claims. This is not only most groundless, but in view of what has occurred, it is wickedly unfounded. You must remember that there is no such thing as the payment of an enemies' war claims. By the law of nations they can never be, and, indeed, never have been paid. A Republican Congress passed a statute just after the war, authorizing those persons in the South who were loyal, to claim upon the government for supplies furnished the government, if they presented their claims within a limited time. That time has long since expired; but men still come to Congress with petitions, saying that they were loyal, and that because of some accident—their absence, or minority, or the like—they failed to present their claims within the prescribed time, and asking now to be permitted to have their claims heard. A great many of these petitions are presented, and I do not doubt but that many of them are without merit, and that claimants pretend to have been loyal who were not. These men have a right to petition Congress to have their claims heard, because the Constitution has secured that right inviolate to every citizen. But, although presented, such claims are far from being generally paid. Indeed, the record shows that very few are ever allowed, and that during the past five years that the Democrats have controlled the House of Representatives, they have allowed far less of such claims than the Republicans did when in power. And when, last year, I proposed a bill which would be a perpetual bar against the consideration of any of these claims, upon the ground that sufficient opportunity had been given for their presentation, and the chances of fraud were so great, that it was better to say now that this class of claims should never be further considered by Congress at all, it was not the South that opposed it. On the contrary, the bill passed a Democratic House by Democratic and Southern votes, but failed in a Republican Senate. And when at the last session a similar bill was proposed, it failed by the opposition of the Republicans in the House. So that to say that when the Democrats get in ascendancy the country will be deluged with claims is in direct contradiction of the experience of the past few years; and all the action of the two parties in Congress, show it to be a naked and groundless pretence.

But it is said that the South is solid. And so it is. But there is no danger from mere solidity. A section of the country may be united, because it may want something, or because it suffers some evil. We have had a solid New England for years; so, too, we have long had a solid Northwest. Of late years we have had a solid West upon the silver question. New England is solid because it wants tariff protection, and the South is solid because it has suffered from carpet-bag oppression.

I do not think that anybody was ever so wicked as to attend the horrors of carpet-bag government. But when those states were reconstructed, it was provided that while every man might vote, no one who had engaged in the Rebellion could hold office; and as the negroes were not capable of discharging many of the duties of office, men came in from without the State who had neither character nor interest there to hold office. And these adventurers established a system of government which in extravagance, iniquity and demoralization has not been equalled in civilized society in our time. It was natural that the South should resent this. It is said that they are not grateful to the Republican party. I do not think that they are. When the Hebrews marched out of Egypt I have no doubt but that the Egyptians, whom they had "spoiled," were glad to get rid of them—but considering what they had suffered at their hands I do not believe that they felt grateful to the Hebrews in any way.

But the South has no natural reason for remaining solid. On the contrary, the interests of the Gulf States are with the Republican party. They went into the rebellion to save slavery, and with the loss of slavery their interests changed. What they want now is a liberal and paternal government: one that will dig out rivers and improve harbors; build expensive public buildings and bank up levees: give subsidies for Texas-Pacific Railways; erect new barracks and government works, and generally spend money with a free hand throughout the South. They cannot get that from the Democratic party, because such action is against our notion of what a National government should do. They can only hope for it from the Republican party—from the party of much government: and I am sure that after this Presidential election is over, whether we prevail or the Republicans prevail, you will find the South breaking up and the Gulf States going with the Republicans. Indeed, if you have watched the legislation for the last year or two in Congress, you have seen that some of the most centralizing measures of government, such as the control of the railways by the Federal government, the establishing of a national quarantine and the like, came from Democratic members of the Congress from the Southern States.

But, it is said that the people of the South are barbarians, who go about killing everybody who votes the Republican ticket. The Chisholm and Dixon murders are the two texts for this outcry. I am no admirer of the condition of things in the South. After one of the great wars which beggar a community, and after ten years of suffering and demoralization under the rule of such carpet bag governments as we have imposed upon them, one might not to expect a very exalted condition of order or temper, or of public or private morals in the South. It is not fair to ruin and demoralize a people, and then blame them exclusively for it.

Besides, nothing is absolutely pure. If you put a sheet of white paper under the microscope it appears full of black specks. If you keep the microscope upon those spots only you might say that the paper was black.

There is no great community in which outrages cannot be found. Not long ago an editor shot a preacher, who was a political opponent, in San Francisco; but would it be fair to say that editors in California generally shot preachers, or even usually shot their political opponents? A bank officer in New Jersey lately killed his coachman; but is it the chronic condition of rich men in New Jersey to go about killing their servants when displeased with them? So, too, in Indiana. Some prohibitionists, dissatisfied with a liquor dealer, put powder under his dwelling-house and blew it up; but is that the way total abstinence is generally enforced in that State?

So long as we have a great political party controlling all the officers and most of the money and newspapers of the country, and interested in exaggerating abuses in the South, so long we shall be liable to be misled as to the real condition of things there.

Finally, the Republicans say that if the Democrats get into power, after having allowed the South to plunder the North, they will permit it to leave the Union. The South attempted that once, and there were more Democrats in this State with muskets, who stood shoulder to shoulder to resist them, than Republicans. The South attempted that too at a time when they were stronger and we were weaker than now, and failed. This attempt they will never repeat. They have not the power, if they had the will, and they have not the will. Then they had something to gain by secession. Now they have nothing to gain by it and everything to lose. They desired then to preserve slavery, and they made war in order to retain it. Having lost slavery utterly and forever, the South has now no possible reason left for leaving the Union or for renewing the war. On the contrary, all their interests, all their wishes, all their hopes are now in the nation. What they want is to be enriched by it, to share in the common growth, property and power.

For the reasons I have suggested the Southern States would have worked with the Republican party right after the war, had they been permitted to do so, and not been constrained by the sufferings and terrors of the "carpet-bag" government that party upheld to resist it.

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE.

MESSRS. WEEKS & POTTER.—Sirs: I have practiced medicine for thirty years, and have been a sufferer myself for twelve years with Catarrh in the nasal passages, fauces and larynx. I have used everything in the materia medica without any permanent benefit, and thought I was incurable, until I was induced by a patent medicine proprietor, that we allopathists are very loth to do, I tried it, and there is the result I got hold of yours. I followed the directions to the letter, and am happy to say have had a permanent cure. Your RADICAL CURE is certainly entitled to the confidence for the cure of that most unpleasant and dangerous of diseases.

A Thrilling Story

OF THE

CHAPTER II.

A poet has said that, "flesh is formed of fiery dust." He was well skilled in the knowledge of human nature and may be cited as an authority. Had he seen the company in the old mill on Fishing Creek, he would indeed have said that the human shapes before him were compounded of "fiery dust." In the days of which we write more active life could be seen on the waters of the Fishing Creek; considerable rafting was done. Boat building was carried on by a class of men called Yankee's, who built canal boats on Fishing Creek and floated them down to the Susquehanna river, thence to other points and sold them and returned and built more. In our last chapter we left our German friend Hans

The wife of a Norman peasant was ill. A physician was called in. "Will you pay me" asked the mistrustful doctor. 'Oh' replied the husband holding up five Louis, 'kill her,or cure her,and these are your's.'

The patient died and the physician demanded his pay. Pardon me says the husband, did you kill my wife? No. Did you cure her? No. Very well since you neither killed her, nor cured her you did not stand by our agreement and I owe you nothing.

with his Yankee companion comparing bargains with the several inmates of the old grist-mill. After carefully comparing the various goods bought at David Lowenberg's the verdict was decided in favor of buying and trading at the reliable Clothing store of David Lowenberg.

"Let us irrigate, boys," was the exclamation of one of the Yankee boat builders, which by the way meant take a drink, to which no particular objection was made for those were no Murphy days; whiskey was cheap, good, and wholesome. We had no fancy flavored mixtures in those days called whiskey. How sadly we have degenerated in what we eat and drink! The crowd was a merry one, and had evidently met many times before; a jolly lot of humanity and ready for any kind of speculation. Various ideas had been talked of in connection with Bloomsburg but like many others they were lost in the air. Among the crowd were men having a knowledge of ore, and lumps of iron ore might be seen around the room, and various mining implements all showing that preparations had been made for an exploration in search of ore. The report had been circulated that other ores than iron ore might possibly be discovered, indeed the report had gone so far as to say that strong evidence had been found in Columbia county of silver quartz existing near Lime Ridge, and indeed this was the business of Hans and his tall friend. The morning having dawned the party broke up starting in different directions. We must wait for their return.
